A Pulaski County man, who along with his wife is charged with human trafficking for allegedly trying to force their teenage daughters to perform sexual acts with men in exchange for cash and gifts, is scheduled to appear in court here Thursday after being arrested on an outstanding bench warrant.

Anthony Hart, 49, allegedly took off with $320 and a work van in 2011 while working as a subcontractor for ARPRO Refrigeration.

Hart was originally arrested on the charge in February of 2011. He posted a $5,000 bond but failed to return to court. He was arrested again on a bench warrant in 2012 but released again on bond

Briscoe murder suspect in court Thursday morning

Luttrell jailed in Shelbyville following extradition from Ohio

From staff reports

The Lexington man charged with gunning down Steven Briscoe last month is scheduled for a preliminary hearing Thursday in Anderson District Court.

Gary Luttrell, 39, of Lexington is charged with one count of murder for allegedly shooting Briscoe, 54, in the chest with a .410 shotgun Sept. 14 in Briscoe's driveway on Fairview Road in western Anderson County.

Luttrell fled but was arrested several days later in Ohio. He was extradited Oct. 4 and is now held on $500,000 cash bail in the Shelby County Detention Center.

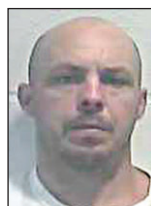

Luttrell has already pleaded not guilty and is scheduled for a preliminary hearing Thursday.

He has already been declared indigent and assigned a public defender.

According to Anderson County 911 dispatch supervisor Todd Sparrow, on the day of his murder a passerby noticed that Briscoe's horses had gotten loose and went to Briscoe's residence to tell him. The passerby found

Pastor surprises wife by renewing vows while celebrating 20th year with Family Worship Center

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

This wasn't the first time Pastor Tony Andrade surprised his wife with wedding vows.

Tony, the senior minister at the Family Worship Center, celebrated his 20th year of ministry at the church on Sept. 29, but also wanted to commemorate another anniversary.

Much to the surprise of his wife, Carla, and the rest of the congregation, the Pastor Appreciation Sunday service including a vow renewal ceremony.

Carla wore blue. Tony brought a bouquet of roses, and said he read something he'd written for his wife. There were tears, Tony said.

"Because the pastor coming in to preach for me married us 25 years ago, we wanted them to be able to witness the renewal of our vows," Tony said in a phone interview Friday afternoon. "Just to be an inspiration for other couples in the church."

Twenty-five years ago, Tony was 28, single and about to motivate a group of single people at a singles retreat.

So the lonely youth minister prayed. Tony said God told him that his wife was right in front of him in Carla Kirkus, the 25-year-old teacher and secretary for a statewide Pentecostal youth ministry in Georgia who had worked with Tony for the last three years.

Tony and Carla had never dated.

More billboards on US 127 draw criticism, support

Planning, zoning commission tables chamber proposal until January

By Ben Carlson
News staff

Fears that proposed changes to the city/county sign ordinance would make Anderson County “look like Somerset” prompted planning and zoning commissioners to table the issue until January.

The Anderson County Chamber of Commerce drafted the proposed changes following three years of meetings that included guidance from County Attorney Bobbi Jo Lewis and City Attorney Robert Myles.

Chamber members said the current sign ordinance is vague, outdated and needs to be changed.

On Wednesday, the Planning and Zoning Commission held a public hearing about those changes, which quickly became a debate about the proposal to add as many as eight billboards along US 127 near the Bluegrass Parkway.

For Commissioner John Litkenhus, that plan is not acceptable.

“To open it up and have signs bigger than that wall is absolutely wrong,” Litkenhus said while pointing at a wall inside the fiscal court’s meeting chambers. “In spite of our poor sign ordinance, we have been able to keep [Lawrenceburg] looking nice. Our job is to protect Lawrenceburg. Let’s not wipe out that corridor.”

“It will start to look like Somerset,” Commission Don Fint added, referencing the Lake Cumberland community in Pulaski County known for its barrage of billboards used to attract lake visitors and tourists.

“I agree with John’s comments,” said Commission Jody Hughes. “I recommend we hand it back to [the chamber] and you tweak it.”

Commissioner Jacob Sea disagreed, saying that the proposed ordinance doesn’t allow enough billboards. He said they should also be allowed at the intersection of US 127 and Highway 151, along with the Willisburg exit of the Bluegrass Parkway.

“There have been three or four gas stations open and close there because you can’t see them,” Sea said in reference to the Willisburg exit. “It seems we’d want to allow all the advertising we can.”

Chamber Chairman John Rennels said he agrees with Sea, adding that when the proposed ordinance was being drafted there was concern about how the addition of any billboards would be received by some.

“We don’t want to look like Somerset, however it would be nice to have [people] come to our community and spend money,” Rennels said.

“I have no problem with billboards, that’s what gets people to stop,” added Sea.

“We agree, but we knew we’d get feedback that we don’t want to look like Pigeon Forge,” Rennels said, adding that the chamber preferred to start out with eight proposed billboards and add to that number over time as they became more accepted.

Chamber board member Jenna Sims said not allowing larger signs hinders Anderson County’s ability to attract larger businesses.

“I know for a fact that Cracker Barrel looked at our sign ordinance and wouldn’t come here,” said Sims, whose father owns Eagle Lake Convention Center and has a long-standing dispute over the current ordinance’s restrictions on allowing him to erect a large pole sign advertising businesses located in Eagle Lake.

“If you keep the small mindset of small signs, we’re not going to get those companies here.”

No residents spoke against the ordinance.

The chamber is proposing sweeping changes to the current ordinance, including allowing banners and large temporary signs for sales, grand openings and other events that currently aren’t allowed.

It also proposes changes to what residents can place on their own property, including a provision that would forbid them from keeping campaign signs in their yards more than seven days after an election.

That proposal came up within weeks of the most recent general election and was discussed then dropped by the fiscal court out of concerns of it violating the First Amendment.

Conversely, businesses would be allowed to keep grand opening signs up for up to 30 days after the event, and real estate agents could leave “sold” signs in yards for 30 days after a property is sold.

Contractors, including landscape and lawn companies, would also be allowed to keep signs in yards they service for up to 14 days each year.

Other changes include allow up to five signs for typical yard sales and up to 20 for those participating in the 127

Yard Sale event.

The commission will reopen the public hearing Jan. 14 at 7 p.m. and allow further public comment.

In the meantime, a list of changes to the proposal is being developed and will be given back to chamber members.

The commission is likely to decide then whether to recommend the changes to the city council and fiscal court, each of which could then decide if the proposed changes become law.

Rennels said after the meeting that he would have preferred the issue weren’t tabled until January.

“Obviously, with us working on this for three years, we would like to see it approved as soon as possible,” he said. “Overall I thought the meeting was very positive.”

Asked his thoughts on how the changes would be received by the city council and fiscal court, Rennels said the fact that both of their attorneys helped draft the changes should be helpful.

“Both sides were favorable, and I would think the county and city would be pleased with the product put before them,” he said.

City council approves $142,794 to lease new street sweeper

From staff reports

The city council unanimously approved a $142,794 five-year capital lease for a new street sweeper.

The council voted 5-0 at its meeting Oct. 14 to authorize the mayor and city clerk to enter into a lease/purchase agreement on a five-year note at 2.69 percent yearly interest for the new stainless steel sweeper.

City council member Larry Giles was absent during Monday night’s meeting.

According to city treasure Judy Russell, the city had budgeted a little more than $30,000 a year to spend on a street sweeper. Russell said the actual state price contract of the TMCO Model 435 street sweeper will cost the city about $29,000 per year over the five years of the lease agreement.

The sweeper will be replacing a 10-year-old piece of equipment that council member Sandy Goodlett said he witnessed being repaired with duct tape during an impromptu visit by Goodlett to the city maintenance garage.

City moves forward on $2 million wastewater basin

Public Works Director Larry Hazlett said plans for the city’s $2 million wet weather detention basin have been submitted to the division of water for approval.

Earlier this year the city council unanimously approved to spend $2 million over the next 20 years on the basin, which will be used to store diluted wastewater during heavy rains.

The wastewater plant currently processes about 1.8 million gallons of water per day, but can reach an average of 10 million gallons of water per day during wet weather conditions, about 1 million gallons more than the maximum allowed for the plant, Hazlett said during the council’s meeting in June.

The new basin can hold two million gallons of runoff water from the wastewater plant if the facility is in danger of falling out of compliance due to high levels of flow.

The cost of the project should not affect sewer rates, Hazlett said.

Council approves franchise agreements for Kentucky Utilities, Bluegrass Energy

The city council unanimously approved two ordinances with identical franchise agreements for Kentucky Utilities and Bluegrass Energy.

The city will continue to receive 3 percent of gross receipts from all electric companies in the new franchise agreements with both companies.

The council unanimously approved an ordinance Sept. 4 to accept bids from all electric companies that sell electric energy in the city.

The new franchise agreement, which was hammered out with the input of Kentucky Utilities and its legal team, will be a 10-year contract with a 45-day period for electric companies to terminate services with the city.

The city would receive an annual 3 percent of gross receipts from each electric company’s sale of electricity to customers, the same percentage of receipts the city received in its previous franchise agreements with KU and Bluegrass Energy.

Trick or Treat on Main trick-or-treating hours set

Lion’s Club to host magic show

From staff reports

Dinky Gowen, Master of Illusion, will perform Saturday, Oct. 19 at 7 p.m. at the Anderson County Middle School, the Lawrenceburg Lion’s Club announced.

Gowen will replace Roger Despard’s Grand Illusion Magic Show, which has highlighted the event for the past 15 years but who has since retired.

The show, featured each summer at the Beech Bend Amusement Park in Bowling Green, will include escapes, illusions, fire eating and comedy.

Tickets are $7.50, with ages 5 and under admitted free. The generous donations of some of the businesses and residents of Anderson County have made it possible for those who could otherwise not see the show, organizers said.

Those in need of financial assistance need only mention this article for free admission, organizers said.

Proceeds go to the Lawrenceburg Lion’s Club to provide corrective vision to the underprivileged in Anderson County and other community services.

Sides square off over proposed Bluegrass Pipeline

Landowners should think, consult lawyer before granting easement

By Terry Geoghegan and Tom FitzGerald

Landowners contacted by the Bluegrass Pipeline Partners LLC, the Williams Company or one of their representatives about selling an easement for the construction of a 24-inch pressurized natural gas liquids pipeline across their property rightfully have questions about whether granting such an easement is in their interest.

The products that will be transported are natural gas liquids, and are not to be confused with natural gas that may be used to heat our homes. Natural gas liquids are a mixture of various hydrocarbons, including ethane, pentane, propane and butane, that are flammable and combustible, and which can contaminate land and groundwater and pose an asphyxiation risk if the pipeline leaks.

Landowners thinking of granting an easement are wise to consult an attorney, your insurance agent, your mortgage holder and your tax preparer because granting an easement may affect the value and insurability of your property, your tax liability for payments received and your mortgage holder's interests.

The easement language that you may be asked to sign was written to benefit the pipeline company, and will likely not contain conditions that strictly limit the rights granted. When negotiating the easement, there are a number of conditions that may be included in the easement agreement, such as provisions:

- Limiting the number, size, and pressure of pipelines that can be constructed on the easement, and the product that the easement may transport.
- Limiting other uses of the easement.

- Requiring landowner approval of any assignment of the easement.

- Limiting the duration of the easement and defining clearly when the easement will be deemed "abandoned," and whether the pipeline will be removed and the easement reclaimed.

- Defining how the company will access the easement, and whether notification to the landowner is required before the company comes on the property for maintenance and

- Requiring that the easement agreement be co-signed by the parent companies of the Bluegrass Pipeline Partners LLC (Williams Co. and Boardwalk Pipeline Partners), since it is a limited liability company, and the parent companies should stand behind any agreement reached in order to assure that if there is a problem, sufficient assets are available to address and resolve the problem.

- Requiring that the landowner be indemnified and that the company provide representation if there is a third-party claim made relating to the pipeline, including any accidents or leakage.

We believe that no landowner should sign an easement because of a direct or implied threat of eminent domain (condemnation). The Kentucky

Attorney General, Energy and Environment Cabinet Secretary, and others who have researched the question do not believe that eminent domain powers exist for this pipeline project. We encourage you not to rush into a decision to grant an easement, and to consult an attorney to help negotiate an easement that protects your interests. For once the easement is granted, it is unlikely that you will be able to change or add terms or conditions.

We have developed an information sheet that has additional considerations that landowners may want to discuss with an attorney in negotiating an easement agreement. It can be found at www.kyrc.org.

Terry Geoghegan is Commonwealth Attorney for Nelson, Hart, and Larue counties. Tom FitzGerald is the director of the Kentucky Resources Council.

The easement language that you may be asked to sign was written to benefit the pipeline company, and will likely not contain conditions that strictly limit the rights granted. When negotiating the easement, there are a number of conditions that may be included in the easement agreement.

repair.

- Limiting the above-ground facilities, such as valves and pump stations, that will be allowed.

- Setting the frequency and manner of inspections to detect leaks.

- Maintaining a sufficient amount of insurance against personal or property damage and injury to third-parties from installation, operation, and removal of the pipeline, including damages from leakage or catastrophic incidents.

- Setting the depth of cover over the pipeline, and requiring that the depth be maintained.

- Requiring independent testing of the quality and quantity of all streams and groundwater resources, and pre-blast surveys of all structures, prior to the start of construction.

- Establishing the precise location and dimensions of the temporary and permanent easements.

Pipeline developers respectful guests, good stewards of land

By Rob Hawksworth

The Bluegrass Pipeline team has begun negotiating easements with landowners. This is a critical step in finalizing the route for this important piece of American energy infrastructure. Prior to commencing these negotiations, Bluegrass Pipeline sent a letter to the affected landowners that addressed a number of issues including the important landowner question "how does this benefit me?"

Over the last several months Bluegrass has increased its communication to landowners, so they understand what the facts are regarding this pipeline project. As the pipeline route begins to take its final form, not all of the landowners we contacted for survey permission are being contacted for easements.

In the three weeks we have been negotiating with landowners for easements, we have secured easements in nine of the 13 counties we plan to cross in Kentucky. Some of the families that have signed easements plan to use the money for important needs in their lives. As we continue this process, Bluegrass Pipeline expects to pay Kentucky landowners between $30 million and $50 million for easements. This influx of cash combined with the new county tax revenues generated by the pipeline begins to show some of the positive economic impact of this project to Kentucky.

We are committed to dealing fairly and professionally with landowners for any pipeline easements. Specifically, Bluegrass Pipeline bases our offers on the following criteria:

- A fair price, based upon local land values and number of acres needed, for the privilege of establishing a permanent easement across a landowner's property. We obtain a permanent easement, which is the right to use the land, but the landowner retains ownership of their land.

- Additional compensation for temporary easements needed during initial construction.

- Additional compensation for disturbance to crops, grazing lands, timber, etc. directly impacted by the installation of the pipeline.

The typical easement has a permanent width of 50 feet and an additional 50 feet of temporary adjacent workspace to be used only during the installation of the pipeline. It's important to note that the easement only grants us the right to use the land as right of way for the pipeline. The landowner retains ownership of the land subject to the right of way and may continue to use it for farming, grazing and any other use that does not result in a structure or large trees on the easement.

We work with each landowner to establish specific conditions and requirements within each easement agreement covering such aspects as land use, equipment, access and depth of cover. We have been building and operating pipelines in America for many years and we have easement agreements with tens of thousands of landowners. We understand each landowner's property is unique and we are committed to taking the time necessary to negotiate an easement that is suitable for the landowner.

Technical aspects related to pipeline construction and operations - for example, pipeline operating pressure and inspection protocols - are not negotiable as they relate to the safe and compliant operation and maintenance of the pipeline as required by the U.S. Department of Transportation's Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration. The pipeline will meet or exceed all federal regulatory and safety standards. Bluegrass Pipeline is committed to protecting cultural and natural resources and will follow the requirements of such environmental regulatory agencies as the Kentucky Department of Environmental Protection, the Kentucky Heritage Council, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Kentucky Fish & Wildlife Service, rather than addressing these types of issues in each easement.

We understand and appreciate that this land belongs to someone else and we are being granted the privilege to work on it. We pledge to be respectful guests and good stewards of the resources. The Bluegrass Pipeline joint venture partners have experience operating 1,400 miles of existing pipeline in Kentucky and approximately 40,000 miles of pipeline across America.

We understand the concerns that have been expressed regarding the need for the project, environmental protection and pipeline safety. We will ensure that the construction and operation of the pipeline will meet or exceed all legal and regulatory requirements.

The Bluegrass Pipeline will ensure Kentucky is a key participant in providing affordable, abundant and accessible energy to American manufacturers. That means jobs, and it means Kentucky continues to play a part in making our nation energy independent.

The Bluegrass Pipeline will be transporting important natural resources to support the resurgence of the petrochemical industry here in the United States.

Once the project is in service, the natural gas liquids in the Bluegrass Pipeline could be tapped by Kentucky businesses to meet the needs of the Commonwealth as they develop.

Thank you for being part of this great opportunity.

Rob Hawksworth is Manager, Land, GIS and Permitting for Williams.

Billboards new weapons of choice in holy war

Column as I see 'em ...

The holy war that has been waged first on the sidelines of local football games and subsequently in the editorial section of this newspaper apparently has plenty of company.

Just in the past month, high school football players were told their coach couldn't lead them in prayer (although in actuality he really wasn't), followed by the school board's decision to pray, but only before it actually opens its meetings.

All of the above is courtesy of the omnipotent, omnipresent and omniscient pests at the ACLU, who apparently imagine themselves a god-like supplement for the easily offended or faithless.

Of course a volley of letters to the editor and guest columns soon followed with people praising — and the case last week of resident atheist Jerry Milburn condemning — the school board.

Not that we're alone in this struggle. Groups with more money that they know what to do with have waged their pro- and anti-God war much more extravagantly.

According to a report in The Kentucky Enquirer, the group behind the Creation Museum near Cincinnati has launched a billboard campaign nationwide to promote its beliefs.

One in New York City's Time Square flashed a video that reads, "To all of our atheist friends: Thank God you're wrong." Similar billboards are going up in San Francisco and Los Angeles — neither of which will ever be confused with the Bible Belt.

Those billboards are in response to atheist-purchased billboards in Times Square, one of which cost $25,000 and included images of Jesus and Santa Claus. It read: "Keep the Merry, dump the myth," according to the report.

The faithful side of the war is planning to counter that billboard and others this year by spending nearly $200,000 to get their message across.

Not to be outdone, the atheists are planning to hit a bit closer to home and buy billboard space in Cincinnati, right up the road from the Creation Museum.

Of course every one of those billboard dollars could be put to use by the faithful to care for those in need, just as I'm sure that there has to be at least a few atheists in need of food or clothes or something.

Rather than spend big bucks to shoot their mouths off, both sides would probably win more hearts and minds by actually helping their fellow man than shouting at him from the rooftops.

Speaking of billboards ...

If the local chamber of commerce gets its way and wins approval to litter Anderson County with billboards, the anti- and pro-God forces here will have yet another outlet for the messages, but it's doubtful they'd spend their money so foolishly.

Speaking of in need ...

Word is that city councilman Larry Giles' health is very poor.

A good man and longtime public servant, Larry has always been among the top vote getters on city council, a testament to his popularity.

Because I'm not subject (yet) to the whims of the ACLU, I'll publicly ask for prayers for Larry and his family during this difficult time.

We're all thinking of you, Larry.

Speaking of popularity ...

In last week's column I included a segment about Bigfoot and referenced a conversation I had years ago with the owners of Panther Rock, a location here that has gained popularity as a possible home of the hairy creature.

I wrote they "kindly invited me to stay the H E double toothpicks" out of there.

They were kind and asked me to stay off their property, but did not use the phrase "H E double toothpicks." That was my lame attempt at humor and I apologize if anyone interpreted that to mean the owners of that land actually used that phrase.

They didn't and certainly wouldn't.

Speaking of lame humor ...

The never-ending dustup about the name of the Washington Redskins has surfaced yet again, including a denouncement by the president and more recently TV sportscaster-turned political hack Bob Costas.

On Sunday night, Costas said it's an insult to have a team called the Washington Redskins and I couldn't agree more.

That team is a well-run business and football operation and associating its name with Washington, DC is clearly not appropriate.

Pluck, pluck, plucking on heaven's door

With three fingers clenched into a curved claw, I tried to pluck heaven out of Jane Bennett's harp.

No rich, strong and angelic voices sang from the chord's strings as I had imagined. Moments earlier, I had glided my pointer finger up the strings in a glissando like a child clumsily drags a stick across the bars of a fence.

My first harp lesson had lasted a total of five minutes, and I was already frustrated.

And strangely, kind of relaxed at the same time.

I now understood what Jane meant earlier when she said she wished she found the harp as relaxing as friend and fellow harpist Sheila McFarland does.

"I would always like to play better than I do," Jane, who has been taking harp lessons for the past six years, said. "Trying to remember what to play next."

Jane prefers to memorize the music (she has about 10 memorized songs in her repertoire) so she can focus on the emotion of the song rather than the notes.

Sheila — who plays hymns on her harp about once a month at First Christian — said she's memorized three songs: "Amazing Grace," "Come Thou Fount" and, for reasons made obvious by Sheila's last name, "McFarlane's Lament."

Her grandchildren call "McFarlane's Lament" the family song, Sheila said.

"Even though some say it's difficult, it's doable," Jane said of the harp. "I love it, and I love practicing. I wish I had more time to practice, and there's so much more to learn."

Sheila and Jane had agreed to meet me in the downstairs foyer of First Christian Church on Monday afternoon to teach me how they've mastered the harp.

"Let me start by saying we've not mastered it yet," Sheila told me with a laugh.

Two years ago, after hearing Jane play her harp at a women's retreat, Sheila said she wanted to learn how to produce that "heavenly sound" herself.

"I was bitten by the bug, so to speak," Sheila, who plays the hand bells and a little piano, said.

Jane, on the other hand, had pursued the piano, the guitar and even the dulcimer in youth before abandoning all three. Her husband Jerry bought Jane, a fan of Celtic and folk music, a lap harp for their 15th wedding anniversary.

The lap harp gathered dust for the next 14 years until Jane heard about the John C. Campbell Folk School, where she could learn correct harp technique.

The playing technique is hard to teach yourself from a "how-to harp" instruction book, Jane said.

After attending the school in North Carolina, Jane came home and forced herself to practice a half an hour each day so she wouldn't forget how to play. She took lessons from then-college student Abigail St. Pierre of Lawrenceburg, who was majoring in harp performance at Indiana University.

Jane and Sheila now learn from harp instructor Lorinda Jones of Elizabethtown. All three women attended last weekend's Southeastern Harp conference in North Carolina, where Jane and Sheila participated in 90 minutes of intensive harp four times a day.

Another thing I learned about the harp: not only are there harp confer-Lawrenceburg residents and harpists Jane Bennett, left, and Sheila McFarland, right, play a duet of 'Amazing Grace' in the downstairs foyer at First Christian Church. McFarland, who was inspired to pick up the instrument after hearing Bennett play at a women's retreat, has been playing the harp for the past two years. Bennett has been playing the harp for the past six years. Both women recently returned from a weekend harpists' retreat in North Carolina where about 170 fellow harpists gathered to take classes.

ences, but there is a Folk Harp Journal. About 170 harpists attended the three-day conference, and Jane said the music is beautiful with one harp, but 20 or 30 harps in one room...

What do 20 or 30 harps playing together sound like? I asked.

Heaven, Sheila mouthed silently while seated behind her new floor harp, the one she picked up two weeks ago after a six-month wait for it to be made.

Harpists hug.

Well, it looks as though you're embracing the 20-pound instrument.

As I sat behind Jane's harp for my first, impromptu lesson, she told me that most people don't know that the "back" or the soundboard of the harp is hollow.

Or that it's pretty hard to play just any song on the harp.

Both Jane and Sheila have songs they're dying to learn how to play.

Jane's dream harp song is "O Holy Night." If she wanted to have the song completely memorized by Christmas, Jane said, she should have started at the beginning of the summer.

Sheila's friends have requested she play "Canon in D" for their daughter's wedding.

The daughter in question is only 10, so Sheila said she has time to learn.

What about if I wanted to learn, let's say, a song by Metallica (maybe "Enter Sandman")? Could I do that?

Sheila and Jane said the harp has to be tuned in one major key, like E, which can then be manipulated into sharpening certain notes by flipping levers located at the end of the harp strings up and down.

Sharpen three notes with a flip of lever, and you've got an entirely different key.

For faster music like Irish jigs and reels, your fingers could be flying fairly fast and sharpening notes mid-song, Sheila said.

The key to the fingering technique is to anchor three fingers on the notes you want to play and your thumb at the ready on the last note (the pinkie is never used). Make sure to follow through when you confidently pluck the strings, slowly curling your fingers into your palm for a rich, more resonant sound.

Although Jane said she doesn't come from a musical family like Sheila (who said all her children know she wants her grandchildren to love to learn music as much as she does) Jane's granddaughter is fascinated by the harp.

At 2 1/2 years old Riley, it sounds like, has surpassed me in technique as Jane shows me how her granddaughter approaches the instrument — bringing her small fingers back into her palm like grandma.

4-H receives

'Ag Tag' funding

Anderson County received $607.35 in "Ag Tag" donations to be distributed equally to 4-H, FFA and Kentucky Proud, according to a news release.

Farmers had the option to donate $10 as part of the Agriculture Program Trust when they renewed their license plates in March.

The 4-H Foundation announced that the 4-H share for fiscal year ending June 30, 2013 was $160,895.06.

The 4-H share of the donation is split equally between the county where the funds originated and the Kentucky 4-H Foundation, which means part of the donations stay in Anderson County. The Foundation's share is used to support state level programs many of the local 4-H members participate in, furthering their positive experiences and opportunities, according to the press release.

Federal shutdown leaves home buyers in limbo

Couple hits snag while trying to buy Lawrenceburg home

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

The Blains already lost one home to the recession, and may be in danger of losing a new home in Lawrenceburg to federal shutdown delays.

About three days before the shutdown began, Colleen and Todd Blain already started the process of closing on a $105,000 three-bedroom, two-bath brick home in Lawrenceburg.

The house was scheduled to be theirs by Oct. 25. The Blains told their landlord they'd move out of their Frankfort rental by Oct. 31.

Colleen and Todd woke up Oct. 1 — the first day of the shutdown — and remember feeling sorry for government employees about to be furloughed.

The Blains know what losing a job feels like.

Colleen, a former administrative assistant for an environmental consulting company, and Todd, a union technician who builds elevators for ThyssenKrupp Elevator of Louisville, said they were both laid off during the recession.

The couple lost their three-bedroom condominium in California and their good credit score.

After Todd found a job in Kentucky with ThyssenKrupp three years ago, things were looking up for the Blains.

They recently found a brick home in Anderson County with a front porch and plenty of backyard space for their three dogs.

The only loan they could qualify for with their ravaged credit, the Blains said, was a U.S. Department of Agriculture guaranteed home loan that required no down payment.

The USDA suspended its mortgage services until the shutdown could be lifted, preventing the Blains from moving into their house and possibly leaving them homeless at the end of the month.

The end of the shutdown may not result in a happy ending for current Frankfort residents Colleen and Todd Blain, who are trying to close on their $105,000 home in Lawrenceburg before their 4.75 percent mortgage rate lock expires on Oct. 25 and their rental lease is up on Oct. 31. The Blains worried that delays in processing their USDA home loan may result in losing a home they wanted to purchase in Anderson County.

"It didn't even occur to me that the USDA shutting down would affect our home loan," Colleen, who got a call from her mortgage banker the first day of the shutdown, said. "No clue."

According to a report from Bloomberg News about the shutdown's effect on potential homeowners, about 1.4 percent of the U.S. mortgage market includes USDA home loans.

Daniel Ruble, vice president of Commonwealth Bank & Trust, said because the entire county qualifies under the USDA's requirements to offer home loans, the percentage of home buyers who use USDA home loans is likely to be much higher in Anderson County.

Although none of his clients were in loan limbo like the Blains, Ruble said he knows about 15-20 clients who are actively shopping for properties, but can't move on homes because of the government shutdown.

"I've got a lot of buyers ready to buy a house with [the USDA guaranteed home loan], and right now if they want to stay with that loan, they have to wait," Ruble said.

"Basically what's happened with the shutdown, those offices are basically closed," he said. "They are empty desks."

The Blains have been waiting since the first day of the shutdown to hear if the USDA approves their future residence's eligibility for the home loan and Stockton Mortgage Corporation's underwriting.

Even if the shutdown had ended last Friday, Colleen and Todd said, they're not sure if the Department of Agriculture would be able to process their loan in time to both close on the house and move out of their Frankfort residence.

It's unlikely their landlord will allow them to stay past Oct. 31, and they can't afford to pay an extra month's worth of rent on top of upcoming closing costs.

"Trying to buy a house off one income ... every penny counts right now," Colleen said.

"At least I do have work and we have an income," Todd added.

The Blains will need to pay an extra fee if they extend their 30-day mortgage rate lock, and may lose their 4.75 percent rate entirely.

Most worrisome of all: the seller wants to move quickly on the house in Lawrenceburg and may not want to extend the Blain's contract past Oct. 25, leaving the couple without a place to live.

And as long as the shutdown lasts, the Blains can only wait.

Guy Hueneke, the Blains' mortgage banker at Stockton Mortgage Corporation in Frankfort, said he personally has one other client in a similar situation to the Blains and knows of other home buyers in the Frankfort office.

The end of the shutdown is not a guarantee that the Blains could get their home loan approved in time, Hueneke said.

"The folks at the USDA in Kentucky are great to work with, but they can only work so quickly," he said.

So Plan B for the Blains as of Day 11 of the shutdown: Get a storage unit. Colleen and the dogs will stay with Todd's parents in Vincennes, Ind. Todd would find a temporary place to stay — possibly with a coworker — so he can continue working. The Blains don't have family nearby and said they don't have too many close friends since moving to the area three years ago.

If Todd, who described himself as an optimist, is worried, then Colleen is terrified.

The couple said they've called and e-mailed their legislative representatives, senators and other public officials (including Congressman Andy Barr and former Anderson County state Rep. Kim King), and said they don't believe either party was listening to its constituents in letting the shutdown continue.

But the Blains didn't want to cast blame last Friday, Day 11 of the federal shutdown; they just wanted the shutdown to end.

As Colleen tried to prepare to move to the house the couple may never live in, she would take down a picture off the wall and then hang it back up.

Colleen — prone to worrying anyway, according to Todd — said she's been so on edge about what will happen when the end of the month comes she doesn't know how to pack.

"The second I wake up every morning I Google, 'government shutdown,'" Colleen said last Friday. "It's been so

What is a USDA home loan?

There are two types of USDA home loans, explains Commonwealth Bank & Trust vice president Daniel Ruble:

- direct home loans: buyers work directly with the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA). No bank is involved with the loan.
- guaranteed home loans: buyers work with a bank or other lending agency to receive USDA-approved loan.

Why a USDA home loan?

Attractive to first-time buyers and buyers who want to keep out of pocket expenses at a minimum, Ruble said, USDA home loans require zero down payments and often have lower monthly mortgage payments than other loan options. Ruble said the government shutdown has affected about 15-20 of his clients shopping for homes and want to finance their purchase using the USDA's mortgage services.

Guy Hueneke, the Blain's mortgage banker at Stockton Mortgage Corporation in Frankfort, said his advice right now to the Blains and his other clients using USDA home loans is to hang on and wait, because that's all the Blains and Hueneke can do.

Even if the shutdown were to be lifted before an Oct. 17 deadline to raise the federal debt ceiling, Hueneke said those processing USDA home loans are most likely to be backed up as they get back to business as usual after being closed for more than two business weeks as of last Friday.

"The folks at the USDA in Kentucky are great to work with, but they can only work so quickly," Hueneke said.

Safer vehicles pose risks for first responders

Firefighters, EMS learn dangers of airbags, alternative ways to cut into wrecked cars

By Ben Carlson
News staff

When Anderson County firefighters placed a mounted tire on top of an airbag system Saturday morning and deployed it, the tire and rim sailed a full 25 feet into the air.

The display was a stark reminder of just one of the growing dangers firefighters face when removing victims from a car wreck.

"That would have killed a firefighter had their face been where that tire was," said Chief Mike Barnes. "That's why we do this training ... to teach them the dangers and help keep them safe."

Battalion Chief Chris Harrod, Capt. Brandon Brown, Lt. Jimmy Robinson and Lt. Mark Hilbert recently attended a training session in Jefferson County designed to teach them about the dangers and challenges posed by newer vehicles. They shared what they learned Saturday as firefighters spend most of the day practicing on junked cars provided by Carey's Towing on Industry Road.

Barnes said along with the ever-increasing number of airbags in vehicles, their construction poses serious challenges in removing victims.

"They are using rolled steel boron bars that run through the doors and dash to keep the vehicle from collapsing on passengers," Barnes said, adding that the hydraulic cutting tools they use are being rendered useless.

"The rescue equipment manufacturers haven't been able to keep up with those improvements," said Barnes. "In a couple of years the equipment we use won't cut this stuff."

To counter that challenge, firefighters learned alternative methods for getting into crumpled cars, including removing the trunk and burrowing in through the back seat.

Another method is to cut through the floorboards of an overturned vehicle, allowing access to victims who are then removed through the vehicle's floor.

Then there is the growing number of airbags, which if accidentally deployed during a rescue can be fatal.

"We started out with an airbag in the steering wheel then one on the passenger side," Barnes said. "Some cars today have upwards of 28 airbags inside the car."

"Those things come out with an explosive force in just milliseconds and have really increased the danger to us from a rescue aspect."

To counter that risk, Barnes said first responders immediately disconnect a vehicle's battery when they arrive but often have to wait minutes to allow stored electricity in

Lt. Mark Hilbert, right, displays a technique known as a dash roll, used to get a steering wheel and dash off a victim's legs and feet. He was among 18 firefighters and EMS personnel who trained on new procedures Saturday morning at Carey's Towing.

Anderson County firefighter John Robinson demonstrates how to tunnel through a vehicle's trunk and back seat during a training exercise Saturday morning at Carey's Towing. Modern vehicles are using steel that traditional rescue tools cannot cut, forcing first responders to find alternative ways to rescue victims.

capacitors that trigger the bags to trickle out.

Then there are the airlines and compressed gas cylinders used to inflate the airbags.

"We have to pull the interior trim off a car to make sure we don't cut through those cylinders, which will explode and injure or kill a firefighter," he said.

Another danger comes from wreck-activated roll bars that pop up from behind seats or out of headrests during an accident.

"Those things fire straight up," Barnes said. "When we arrive at a wreck and the victim says their neck hurts, a fireman will get in the back seat and hold the driver's neck. If something happens with the car's electrical system and makes the roll bar fire, it will hit the firefighter in the chin, which could also be fatal."

Barnes said the 18 firefighters and EMS personnel who attended Saturday's training performed extremely well under what were difficult circumstances.

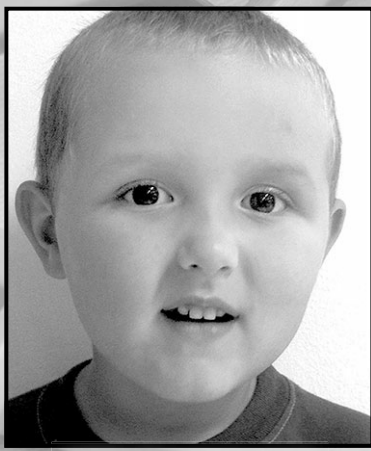

"I was very impressed with their thought processes and how they picked up on this," Barnes said. "They did an outstanding job."

County firefighters visit students during National Fire Prevention week

By Ben Carlson
News staff

Tim Harrod put on his firefighter gear and knelt, allowing students from Saffell Street Elementary School to touch him and understand that beneath the uniform is a nice guy, not a scary monster.

Harrod's performance was repeated for grade school students across the county last week, giving them the chance to meet real firefighters and understand what they do as part of National Fire Protection week.

Chief Mike Barnes said the annual visit to schools is a key element in teaching children and their families how to survive if a fire breaks out in their homes.

"We start out with a fireman in uniform and let the children see that there is actually a good guy in there so they're not scared when he comes crawling down a hallway," Barnes said, describing Harrod's performance.

"He'll crawl around and holler, 'Is anyone in there?'" and teach them to scream 'I'm in here!' Kids will hide when they're scared, so we let them come over and touch him and feel him so they'll understand that he's not some ugly monster coming down the hallway."

National Fire Prevention week is always in October and coincides with the anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire in 1871 that killed hundreds of people and destroyed most of the city.

Barnes said students are taught about the importance of smoke detectors and how to react if there's a fire.

"We talk about EDITH (exit drills in the home) and they learn they need two ways out of every room along with a designated meeting place," Barnes said. "In some fires you read about someone running back inside to find a missing kid, only to have the kid run to the back yard."

Students also learn how to stop, drop and roll, which was demonstrated by firefighter Andrew Zopff's son

Drew during a visit to Turner Elementary.

Barnes said the visits give children a chance to interact with firefighters and even take the message of safety home to their families.

"We really push knowing their names, address and phone number in case they have to dial 911 in an emergency," Barnes said. "We'll go through the types of questions a dispatcher will ask so they'll be able to respond."

Barnes said it also gives firefighters a chance to visit and interact with children they someday might have to assist in an emergency.

"These guys are volunteers," Barnes said. "Most of them use their own vacation time from work to come out and visit schools, and it's something they really enjoy doing."

SCIENTIFIC METHOD WITH MARSHMALLOWS AND PASTA

Saffell Street fourth graders Richmond Boggs and Anna-belle Caudill test the strength of their pyramid design while learning about the scientific method. The class, in cooperation with 4-H, used marshmallows, flat linguini pasta and spaghetti noodles and made predictions about which materials they thought would make the strongest pyramid. As a group, they constructed the pyramid and tested its strength, according a news release from Saffell Street Elementary. If the materials were not strong enough to hold a penny, then they had the opportunity to improve their structure.

Man's body found behind vacant building

Police investigating death as suicide, no foul play suspected

From staff reports

City police continue to investigate the death of a 53-year-old as an apparent suicide after finding a man's body behind a vacant building on Glensboro Road Monday afternoon.

James True, 53, died Oct. 14 of a single gunshot wound to the head, City Police Chief Chris Atkins said. True had a Corbin address, but had been living in Lawrenceburg in his RV at 1068 Glensboro Road for a short time, Atkins said. Police do not suspect foul play, he said.

Anderson County Coroner Mark Tussey said he would wait until he reviewed the autopsy and toxicology reports, as well as additional evidence from the scene, before ruling on True's manner of death.

True was pronounced dead at 3:50 p.m., Tussey said.

Anderson County animal control contacted police around 3 p.m. after they received a call about dog, responded to where True lived and found his body outside his RV, Atkins said.

Witnesses at the scene said Monday the last time they spoke with True, he had sounded upbeat about potential job prospects in Corbin.

Anderson County EMS, coroner's office and city police responded to the scene.

Instead of moping about sin, rejoice in God's forgiveness

Last weekend, I had a particularly bad day. I do not mean bad as in the sense that the day was inherently corrupt, since the holy scriptures indicate that each day is fashioned by God (Psalm 118:24). By "bad" I mean what I contributed to it, i.e., my sinful nature as it is inclined to act and react wrongfully in the daily operations of life (Rom. 7:14ff).

Brian Owens
Faith columnist

The morning after this particular bad day I read a blog a friend had shared on Facebook. I had never heard of this blogger, but the title of his article caught my attention: "6 Reasons Not to Be Discouraged and Depressed Over Your Sins." In this article, he summarizes a chapter in a book entitled "A Lifting Up for the Downcast." This book, written by 17th century Puritan pastor William Bridge, seeks to minister to the disheartened and the melancholy. Unlike much of what lines the shelves of bookstores today, seeking to deliver "self-help," Bridge's seeks to rightly apply scripture as the only balm that will heal the deep wounds of the soul. After all, our sundry difficulties, whether they are emotional or otherwise, can be boiled down to one common denominator — sin.

Yet while the reality of sin is that sin is an actuality in our lives, we need not be bound in the chains of depression and discouragement over what has already been dealt with through the life, death and resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Some Christians are notorious for attracting the emblematic raincloud, emanating a "woe-is-me" temperament; such are the people I try not to ask how their days are going for fear they may ruin mine! These people, as hard as they may try, cannot seem to get out from underneath the gloomy temperament and approach to life. Theirs is a witness that inadvertently does damage to the cause of Christ as unbelievers see them as say, "that is what a Christian is supposed to look like?"

There are others who genuinely strive for joy-filled holiness (Heb. 12:14) when, at times, their sin nature just will not die quietly. They are not "poor, pitiful me," nor are they hypersensitive to sin; they are simply trying to do what all disciples should be doing, they daily work of repentance and serpent-killing; or as Puritan pastor John Owen wrote, "Be killing sin, or it will be killing you."

These are genuine believers, who just want to be like Jesus, yet they find themselves face-to-face with the daily reminder that they cannot do what the Bible calls them to do — at least not in their own strength. Our daily failures, instead of serving to remind us of our reliance on the Holy Spirit, often bring about a despondency that in itself stunts our growth in grace.

When asked if a Christian should be discouraged over a particular sin, Mr. Bridge answers, "No! For discouragement itself is a sin, another sin, a gospel sin." He reasons that when we allow ourselves to be discouraged, we are, in essence, doubting the Gospel, i.e. Jesus Christ's substitutionary, atoning death on the cross, and his subsequent resurrection, all on behalf of his people.

This is not to say we are to sin willingly or take a flaccid approach to dealing with the presence of sin in our lives (Rom. 6:1-2); rather we are to see it for what it is — something that God the Father has dealt with in the death of Christ. And if we be in Christ, our sin has been forgiven!

God is not pleased with sin; nor is he pleased with our discouragement over sin. As Bridge writes, "The purpose of all our sorrow and grief is, to embitter our sin to us, to make us prize Jesus Christ, to wean us from the delights and plea-tures of the creature, to reveal the deceitfulness and naughtiness of our own hearts." Don't relish, nor be dejected in your sin. As one divine said, "For one look at the self, we ought to take 10 looks at Christ."

It is in the light of Christ's beauty that our sin is the ugliest and most abhorrent to us. This is the surest motivation to lay aside the sin (Heb. 12:1-2) and lay hold of the joy of forgiveness.

Sin in reality is:

Pleasure that turns to problems.
Freedom that turns to bondage.
Curiosity that becomes a curse.
Living it up, then wishing you could live down your reputation.
Trying things you wish you hadn't.
Sowing your wild oats and then praying for a crop failure.
Drinking the devil's brew before you noticed the skull and crossbones on the label.
Stretching the law and having it snap back and sting you.
Going along with the crowd before you ask where it's going.
And finally, leaving home and God for a while and then discovering you can't seem to find the way back. (Author Unknown)

"Sin will always take you farther than you wanted to go; keep you longer than you wanted to stay, and cost you more than you wanted to pay."

Motorcycle Club donates funds to veterans facility

From staff reports
Members and friends of the Second Brigade Motorcycle Club (SBMC) met at the Lawrenceburg Walmart parking lot to head out on their "mission" Sept. 29, according to a news release.

The club raised over $1,400 on one of its poker runs to help veterans, and this year the SBMC chose the Thomson-Hood Veterans facility in Wilmore.

"The club's main focus and mission statement is to help, support, encourage and love all veterans and especially the Vietnam veterans," event organizers said in the release.

Working closely with the SBMC was Michelle Ewing, the activities director of the facility. Ewing works one on one with most all of the veterans in the 285-bed facility and "has her finger on the pulse of what they need and enjoy most," according to the release.

SBMC members "Tester," his wife "Hotpants," and Ed Peirce purchased fishing equipment, sensitive skin razors, shaving cream and birdseed for the veterans to care for the birds in the aviary and on the grounds. The remaining funds were turned into gift cards from Walmart so veterans could buy whatever they wanted.

Wheelchairs lined up inside the facility at Thomson-Hood to match and surpass the line of motorcycles that had lined up in the front parking lot, SBMC members said in the release.

"As the SBMC dismounted and went in the doors, you could see the excitement and joy on the faces of some of America's bravest war heroes, some of which that have no family at all. I about broke down," Peirce was quoted as saying in the release. "I asked if one of the residents had seen his family lately and he looked me right in the eye and said, 'you are my family, brother.'"

The SBMC each took a veteran out to the motorcycles and spent the next several hours just fellowshiping and

"being a friend" to those men and women of valor. They each had their favorite motorcycle and just like the members of the SBMC, they all loved all of them. President of the local Chapter H of the SBMC Elderon Riley, upon leaving the facility, said, "If that doesn't touch your heart, you just don't have a heart."

For any that wish to make a financial donation checks for any amount are greatly appreciated and can be made to: THVC, 100 Veterans Drive, Wilmore, KY 40390, Attn: Michelle Ewing.

Anderson County football player Chase Sutherland (17) and West Jessamine's Jackson Pearce greet each other in the handshake line following Anderson's district football victory Friday night.

Hearts should enforce true sportsmanship, not KHSAA

By now, you have had the time to a) seethe, b) show righteous indignation, c) wonder what the world is coming to, or d) laugh at the headlines emerging from the news regarding the Kentucky High School Athletic Association and handshakes.

Or your reaction could have been like one of my old college professors who loved to give multiple choice questions in an any, all, or none format.

John Herndon
Sports Editor

Ever since last Tuesday afternoon, when the KHSAA issued a press release regarding post-game handshake lines, those simple little post-game gatherings have been a hot topic of discussion.

In case you missed it - and if you did, welcome back from your trip to outer space - the state's governing body for high school sports published a note that said, "It is hereby directed that teams and individuals do not participate in organized post-game handshake lines/ceremonies" beyond those required by certain sports, such as wrestling.

I had just loaded my camera in my car after covering the boys' state golf tournament at Bowling Green Country Club when I first saw the news. Before I got back to I-65, my Twitter account was sending my phone into convulsions.

By the time I got home, the KHSAA had already issued a clarification.

Prior to leaving the golf course, I read the release, re-read it and went on my merry way. I thought it was kind of odd, but did not think an outright ban on post-game handshakes, as some were - and still are - reporting, was the intent of the directive. I took it to mean that schools were to supervise the post-game handshake lines that have become a tradition in most sports and if the lines could not be adequately overseen, then it was best not to do them.

Maybe that was because I have known KHSAA commissioner Julian Tackett for many years and know what he desires in high school sports. While I don't always agree with Tackett, I firmly believe his desire is to do what is best for kids. He has promoted sportsmanship so much that I could not imagine any circumstance where he would go any other route.

But, there is no question the wording of the original release could lend itself to misinterpretation.

Here are some thoughts from someone who has been around high school sports, a lot of high school sports, since 1985.

First, the KHSAA did not ban post-game handshakes. I would be surprised if they ever do.

In reality, what the KHSAA intended is a good idea. Unfortunately, many people did not read past some sensational headlines and the political grandstanding of some of Frankfort's finest and missed that point.

Last Wednesday, Tackett issued

Bearcats, Flyers battle for district title, again

Despite graduation losses, Franklin unbeaten

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Just like it has been the last two seasons, Anderson County and Franklin County sit atop the Class 5A, District 6 standings with Friday's showdown being for the regular season district championship and the district's top seed in the state playoffs, which start next month.

No matter what happens the final two weeks of the season, Friday's winner will be the regular season district champion and will host the first two rounds of playoff games. The loser most likely will be the district runner-up but could fall to third place if certain things happen the last two weeks.

Many figured Franklin County would be rebuilding after losing the mega-talented Ryan Timmons, now at the University of Kentucky, and quarterback Logan Woodside, now at the University of Toledo. However, coach Chris Tracy has simply reloaded to go 8-0 so far this year.

That makes Franklin 31-2 over the last three seasons.

"Franklin County is outstanding," Peach says of the Flyers. "They are undefeated and are in the Top 5 (Class 5A teams) in the state. It should be another incredible game."

Running back Chris Roberts leads the ground game with better than 800 yards while multi-purpose threat Lorenzo McCaskell has over 1,000 yards rushing and receiving combined. He is averaging over 17 yards every time he touches the ball and torched Woodford County for 106 yards and two touchdowns in just four carries last week.

Quarterback Barrett Sanderson has taken over for Woodside and is completing nearly 70 percent of his passes. He went 11-for-14 for 203 yards against Woodford.

Franklin leads the all-time series with Anderson, 12-2, and has won the last six times the teams have met, including a 56-52 thriller last year. Two years ago, Franklin rolled to a 56-24 victory before an overflow crowd at Warford Stadium.

Anderson's last win in the series came in 2002, when the Bearcats routed the visiting Flyers, 38-8.

Anderson admits that last year's result stung for a while, but quarterback Zachary Carmichael downplays the revenge factor, focusing instead on the task at hand.

"We want to win a district championship," he said. "That is one of our goals. We have to beat Franklin County to achieve one of our goals."

Peach welcomes the chance.

"This group has the opportunity to play for the district championship at home," he said. "They have put in a lot of work and a tremendous amount of effort to put themselves in this position."

It was supposed to be Mission: Impossible for Anderson County football.

No, we aren't talking about just beating West Jessamine. The Bearcats took care of that nicely with a 24-6 win that drew a collective "ho-hum" when the score posted across the state. It was a margin in line with what the major computer rankings predicted.

But stopping West Jessamine's Devin Taylor? Let's just say Peter Graves or Tom Cruise might not have accepted such a task.

The Bearcats did take it on, however. All anyone needed to know about making the mission possible was seeing defensive coordinator Duane Hammons racing for the statistics. He took one glance and kept the team together a few seconds longer after the post-game meeting. Taylor, the state's leading rusher at 256 yards a game, had gotten just 81.

Anderson County defensive lineman Nathan McGregor (53) slows down West Jessamine star Devin Taylor while Anderson teammates Tristin Ashburn (15), Landon Searcy (57) and Tyler Puckett move in to complete the stop. The Bearcats held Taylor, the state's leading rusher, to 81 yards in the 24-6 win.

BOWLING GREEN - It was only a small step.

Make that a giant step. One that had a disappointing end, but it was a major stride for Anderson County boys' golf.

While the Bearcats made a quick exit from the Leachman Buick-GMC-Cadillac Boys' State Golf Tournament, they vowed that 2013 would be a foundation year for return trips. "I will go on the record now," Anderson coach Jim Beward said. "I don't think it will be another 20 years before we are back."

It had actually been 19 seasons since a boys' golf team from Anderson County qualified for the state tournament, but really, who is

Riley's place in local history assured

Anderson senior places 22nd

By John Herndon

Kaitlyn Riley is sure she didn't play her best golf at the state high school tournament last week.

The record book, however, is just as sure about her place in Anderson County sports history.

The senior shot a two-day total of 156, a score that was 12 strokes over par at Bowling Green Country Club and good enough for 22nd place in the state. But when Riley launched her first tee shot Friday, it marked her fourth consecutive start in the final rounds of high school golf each season.

It is certain that Riley is the first Anderson girls' golfer to ever accomplish a 4-for-4. It is believed

UK Hoops to Host NCAA Tournament First and Second Rounds

The University of Kentucky has been selected to host the first and second rounds of the 2014 NCAA Tournament in Memorial Coliseum, the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee announced last Wednesday. According to a news release, it is the first time UK has been chosen to host a portion of the women's tournament.

The KFC Yum! Center in Louisville was also chosen to host a regional tournament the following week.

"I am thrilled to hear the NCAA Tournament is coming to Memorial Coliseum," UK Hoops Coach Matthew Mitchell said in the release. "This gives our players the incredible opportunity to play in the NCAA Tournament at home in front of the loyal and passionate members of the Big Blue Nation."

This marks the first time in program history that Memorial Coliseum (capacity 8,000) will serve as the site for a women's basketball NCAA Tournament game. However, Memorial has been the site of 10 NCAA Tournaments in women's volleyball and is set to host the NCAA Regionals later this season on Dec. 13-14.

The nationally-ranked Wildcats return 10 letterwinners and four starters from last season's squad that won a school-record 30 games and advanced to its third NCAA Elite Eight in the last four years.

The NCAA Tournament First and Second Rounds will be held March 22-25. Games will either be played on March 22 and 24 or March 23 and 25. Ticket information will be announced at a later date.

Lady Rams volleyball undergoes major turnaround

From staff reports

The Christian Academy Lady Rams are completing the biggest turnaround in school history. After failing to win a single game during the 2012 season, the Lady Rams head into next week's regional tournament, being held in Independence, Ky., sporting a 6-5 record with one game left to play in the regular season.

Coach Meghan Bowling fielded a very young team last year and experienced the growing pains of playing freshmen and sophomores. According to Bowling, the turnaround this year has been "remarkable and reflects the hard work, intensity and commitment that this group has put into changing their mental attitude toward playing the game.

"When you lose a lot, you have a lot of doubt about your self, your team and the ability to compete. Our whole mind set is different this year with this group being older and more focused."

Nancy Lee Holt is the team's setter and does an "outstanding job of covering the court and putting the ball in a position for teammates Ashley Moses or Sophie Etherington to crush it," says Bowling.

Brette Elliott is one of the team's strongest servers and is capable of getting on runs where nothing is returned across the net. Payton McKinney and Teri Crutcher are excellent back row players, handling the ball efficiently, and making certain the Rams can keep the ball in play on their side of the court. Brooke Carpenter brings a bright spirit to the team by constantly being ready for every game, diving on the floor for loose balls, and making key returns.

The team's only senior, Sydney Peyton, serves as an excellent role model for her younger teammates. "She keeps their spirits up, always gives a 100 percent and never gives up in those challenging situations that used to do us in last year. Her leadership has been one of the keys to our success," said Bowling.

While the team has several new players to the team this year, the real key has been their ability as a group to be more mature and to accept the need to work hard to overachieve.

The team philosophy follows the scripture verse from Colossians 3:23, "Whatever you do, work at it with all your heart, as working for the Lord, not for human masters."

Coach Bowling is "pleased with what she has seen out of team to this point. Depending on the results of our final game, we can enter the regional tournament as the No. 2 seed. To my knowledge that's the highest any Rams volleyball team has ever been seeded. We'd like to believe that this is just the beginning of what this group can achieve."

she is the first Anderson athlete in a single-class sport to earn a state tournament quadruple.

"It is crazy and hard to believe," Riley said. "I have worked hard and it paid off."

Riley, who started playing golf competitively when she was in the sixth grade, saved her best state tournament for the last.

Her total was seven strokes better than her finish last year and 21 strokes better than 2011. As a freshman, in 2010, Riley made the state, but was cut after the first day when she shot a 97.

Friday, Riley might have known her chance at a state championship - eventually won by West Jessamine's Grace Rose with a two-under 144 - would be out of her reach after firing a 79 over her first 18 holes.

Riley got in a bit of a bind from the outset when she double-bogeyed the first hole. "I had a good drive, but then my second shot went over the green and I just didn't putt," Riley said.

But the senior regrouped, playing even over the next six holes before carding bogeys on No. 8 and No. 9. She finished with a seven-over 79.

"I can't say I wasn't nervous," Riley said. "I knew it was my last time I could be here."

Not great, but Riley felt she would have 18 more holes in her high school career. "I felt pretty good about it," she said. "I know that if I didn't make it, it just wasn't meant to be. There would have to be some ridiculously low scores."

Riley said she was "not hitting the ball solid. I pretty much kept the ball on the fairways, but my second shots killed me. I didn't hit a lot of greens."

Riley easily survived the cut, which came at 83, then turned in a solid round in Day 2. Starting on No. 10, she was three-over at 39 when she made the turn, then birdied No. 1 and No. 4. A double-bogey on No. 2 might have ended any hope of a miracle, but Riley finished in a four-way tie for 22nd along with Rachel Gathof and Meredith Moir of state team champion Sacred Heart and Summer Simmons of runner-up Cal-loway County.

Last year, Riley finished 28th at the state.

"For as bad as I was playing, I am proud of my score," Riley said with a smile.

guard and softball second baseman in middle school, Riley opted to give up those sports to concentrate solely on golf. Several colleges are very interested in having her on their golf teams, but Riley says she has not committed to any school yet.

"I am definitely going to take a break now," she said, "but I will have to get back out on the course soon."

Peach ties old coach as Bearcats' winningest

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

When Mark Peach returned home to Anderson County in December of 2004, his main desire was to restore Bearcat football to a place among the state's best programs. There is little doubt Peach has done so in his nine years as Anderson head coach with two district titles, a regional crown and a state runner-up finish. Friday's win over West Jessamine added one more line to Peach's resume. He's now tied for the most wins by any coach in Anderson history at 69. And, in an ironic twist of fate, Peach is tied with Anthony Hatchell, who took over at Anderson in 1988, Peach's senior year in high school, and led the program for 10 years. Peach is 69-32 in nine seasons while Hatchell was 69-37 during his tenure. "Coach Hatchell, I have a tremendous amount of respect for," Peach said Friday. "He had a wonderful run here and certainly made great contributions to our program." Hatchell left Anderson for Graves County and later coached at Caldwell County. He eventually became principal at Mayfield High School and was the first principal at Collins High in Shelbyville. Hatchell is now retired. Peach will become the winningest coach in Anderson history with his next victory. He went 1-9 his first season, but has had a winning team each year since. He was the Class 5A Coach of the Year in 2007, when the Bearcats won their first 11 games before losing in the second round of the playoffs. While in high school, Peach played for legendary coach Sam Harp before Hatchell took over. He also played basketball for Coach Glen Drury. Peach went on to play football at Campbellsville University and served as an assistant coach at Adair County and Franklin-Simpson before getting his chance to be a head coach at Hancock County. At Hancock, Peach led the Hornets to the state championship game. He also coached at Paul L. Dunbar in Lexington and had a two-year stint as head coach at Campbellsville University - he was 15-7 and had the Tigers in the NAIA playoffs - before returning to Anderson County. He says each of those stops have been important in his development as a coach. "You take certain things from different people along the way," Peach said. "I take certain things from a lot of different coaches, whether it is football, basketball, baseball or anything. I have had some great people I have had the opportunity to play for and work for." And Peach says his success in his hometown is not a one-man show. "I am very, very thankful," Peach said. "I have had a tremendous amount of help the nine years that I have been here. I am very grateful. It all starts with the people that brought me back. I am grateful for the people I have worked for. "We have had good people at the middle school level and the freshman and JV level. It has been a wonderful group of people that have helped me through this process." Comment at www.the-andersonnews.com.

MISSION

The Bearcats erupted. It was the first time Taylor, a senior, had been held to under 100 yards since the final game of his sophomore year. "He could be, arguably, the best running back in Kentucky," Anderson head coach Mark Peach said. Averaging three touchdowns a game, Taylor never smelled the end zone. Anderson improved to 6-1 and 3-0 in Class 5A, District 6 play. West Jessamine is a deceptive 3-5, 1-3. "Coach Hammons had a great game plan," added senior lineman Landon Searcy, who led Anderson with six tackles. "We were really fortunate," said quarterback Zachary Carmichael. "Taylor is one of the best running backs in the state and (the Bearcat defense) did a great job." In a certain preview of the key district contest, a local writer (blush) declared that trying to stop Taylor would be an exercise in futility, that Anderson could only hope to slow him down. But no one could slow the giddy Hammons down when he saw the stat sheet. "We haven't seen anyone like him in at least five years," Hammons said before the game. "I have had some sleepless nights this week." Hammons likely had sweet dreams last Friday as Anderson held the West Jessamine team to 26 points below its average. It was a night when the Bearcat defense stopped the West Jessamine star with gang-tackling and open-field stops. Most of all, it was attention to detail. "You have to do it together," Peach said. "You can't have just one guy trying to tackle. We talked about it all week and the kids accepted the challenge. The challenge was, 'I have got to do my job.' "We have to do it all together and trust each other to do their jobs." That happened on both sides of the ball. When West Jessamine had the ball, a swarm of red jerseys surrounded Taylor, or a teammate carrying the ball. When the Bearcats were in control, they were efficient, scoring for what amounted to their only drive of the first half - they did have the ball for one play after stopping the Colts with 30 seconds to go - and converting their first two possessions after halftime. The Bearcats had to slug it out as West Jessamine took a page from Woody Hayes, snapping the ball 25 times but throwing only three passes. The Colts held the ball for nearly 17 of the first 24 minutes, including a drive that took up 10:42. It came up empty when the the Bearcats stopped the Colts on fourth-and-3 at the Anderson 31 with 30 seconds left in the half.

"We knew they were capable of that," Peach said. "They had a possession against Franklin County that, I think, was over 20 plays." West's longest drive against Franklin back on Sept. 27 was actually 11 snaps, but the Colts held the ball for nearly 30 minutes in the 42-32 loss. Taylor ran for 276 yards in that one. But the Bearcats, known for an explosive attack that had been putting better than 42 points on the scoreboard every night, showed they could go old school too, taking 14 plays to go 95 yards on their only possession of the first half. Quarterback Zachary Carmichael capped the drive with a one-yard dive for the only score before the break. "I have never had one possession in a half," Carmichael said. "At Boyle County (four weeks earlier), we had one in a quarter. I was just glad we could score on that one possession. Anderson took control in the third quarter, however, marching 61 yards in six plays following the second half kickoff. Carmichael found Chris Toomey alone in the end zone from 12 yards out, punctuating a drive that had begun with an illegal block and holding penalties bringing big gainers on the first two plays from scrimmage. "Coach Peach made some really good play calls," said Toomey, who hauled in his first varsity touchdown pass. After stopping West Jessamine's ensuing drive, the Bearcats again went the length of the field, this time 97 yards in seven plays to put things seemingly out of reach. Cox did the honors from two yards out but it was his 32-yard run to the West Jessamine 4 that highlighted the drive. It was nothing fancy, as Cox seemed to make a statement that he, not Taylor, should be named the district's Player of the Year. It eventually took eight Colt defenders to bring Cox down. Taylor answered with a statement of his own, returning the ensuing kickoff 65 yards. A personal foul pushed the Colts to the Anderson 18, where quarterback Jackson Pearce found Ian Kossick along the right sideline for West's only score of the night. The Colts never threatened again and Anderson's Joe Rose put things away with a 29-yard field goal. "We knew they were capable," Peach said. "You look who they have lost to. They lost to Covington Scott, who is undefeated, by one point. They lost to Franklin County, who is undefeated. "The kids listened to the game plan and they listened to the adjustments. They bought into what we asked them to do." And the Mission: Impossible became very possible. Comment at www.the-andersonnews.com.

a lengthy clarification of the directive. One portion reads, "The intent and spirit of the directive/prescription/recommendation was two-fold and remains in place today. First, if schools desire to perform postgame rituals such as handshake lines, etc., they must be able to monitor the activity closely. If they do not have adequate personnel to properly monitor, then they shouldn't allow the activity. "Secondly, there is a misconception in some circles that the officials are somehow responsible for monitoring what happens postgame. Nothing could be further from the truth." Basically, it is saying officials need to get off the field, which has always been the case, and schools are to be sure to monitor what happens after the games. It seems impossible to think something bad would happen in a moment of "sportsmanship," but it occasionally does. The KHSAA said this school year alone has had incidents in football, soccer and, believe it or not, volleyball. In my 28 years of writing, I can't say I have ever seen a brawl break out in the handshake lines, but have seen a handful of incidents as the result of hard feelings arise in at least three sports. They are rare, but do happen. I must interject, however, that I have seen far more problems from fans and/or parents during games than from kids or coaches after them. And, to its credit, Anderson County High School polices games and events better than most schools. From this corner, there are mixed feelings about the post-game handshake line. On one hand, I love the visible display of sportsmanship. On the other, I have observed so many half-hearted hand pats and mumbled "good games" that I have wondered for some time if it really serves the intended purpose. On one hand, I really like the traditions or rules of some sports - tennis and wrestling come to mind - of immediately shaking hands after a competition. In wrestling, unsportsmanlike behavior following a bout can cost a team points. It happened to Anderson County several years ago at the regional tournament. On the other, I believe true sportsmanship must come from the heart, not the rule book. Most of all, I wonder why it has come to this? Has our society become so uncivil that we can't simply enjoy a game? Have we made the games so important that we forget they really are games? If we really are going to make things better, our look should not be toward the Kentucky High School Athletic Association. Instead, change must come from deep within our own hearts. Comment at www.theandersonnews.com.

Anderson athletic director likes the post-game handshake

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Anderson County High School athletic director Rick Sallee is a fan of the traditional post-game handshake between teams, but he understands why the Kentucky High School Athletic Association issued a directive last week that urges schools to discontinue the practice if it cannot be supervised. "I think it is a reaction to some of the things that are going on," Sallee said. "I think they are trying to be proactive." The KHSAA noted it has had reports of several dozen incidents occurring in handshake lines over the last three years. It also noted incidents in football, soccer and volleyball this fall. Over the last year, there have been several incidents that have made the national news, including a third quarter brawl between Indianapolis Arsenal Tech and Fort Wayne South Side in Indiana. Sallee said he had also seen footage of a football fight in Florida and a youth soccer incident from Utah where an official eventually died after being struck by a player who had been yellow-carded. "I don't think (the directive) is a sign of anything the schools are doing," Sallee said. "It is a sign of what society has become." Sallee noted that a major portion of the directive was that schools are responsible for behavior and that the jurisdiction of game officials ends when the final horn sounds. Under the directive, officials can be penalized if they do not leave the playing field immediately after a contest, unless it is a sport, such as wrestling, that requires officials to stay on the floor. In wrestling, participants must shake hands with the official, with each other and with each opposing coach at the end of a match. Sallee said that Anderson County makes a strong effort to police contests. Several administrators and teachers routinely work football games while some teachers or administrators also sit or stand with the student section. The same holds true for home basketball games and tournament games. Sallee, however, said some sports that do not command high attendance can be tougher to monitor, especially in the moments immediately following a contest. "The first thing I thought of was soccer," Sallee said of the directive's effect. "They have the handshake line and do a fist-bump with the officials. How will that pan out?"

Sallee also noted that in the fall, when the school sponsors eight varsity teams, half of which also have separate junior varsity and freshman clubs, is a time of scarce workers. "You just have so many different things going on," he noted. "You can have a soccer game and a volleyball game and a freshman football game all going on at the same time. It's hard to staff all of those" Still, Sallee understands the KHSAA position. "I think what they are saying is 'If you do have handshakes, they need to be supervised. If you can't supervise it, then don't. If something happens, it is on you." "I think they are just giving an opportunity to tell teams, 'No handshake lines,' if you can't supervise them. "I like the handshakes. When I was in school at Pikeville High School, our coach had us practice checking into a game and practice handshakes. "I like it when you watch the NFL games and the NBA games and they are shaking hands and I like it when I see a coach pull a player from the other team over and tell him what a good game he'd played. "We can go tooth and nail to beat each other, but when it is over, it is still just a game."

'Kentucky' more than home for Lady Bearcats

Special play lifts Anderson to district tourney win

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Jason Earnest might have taken something from John Calipari's playbook Monday night.

Seeing his Anderson County girls' soccer team deadlocked in a scoreless tie with Shelby County early in the second half of the 30th District Tournament semifinal, Earnest simply called "Kentucky."

Grace Casciola delivered a perfect corner kick to Madeline Wilson, who drove the ball home with 35:15 to play.

It would be all the host Lady Bearcats would need to keep their season alive, but they added a late goal from Joy Andrade to oust Shelby, 2-0.

Anderson moves on to defend its district championship against Spencer County at 7 p.m. tonight, Wednesday, Oct. 16.

"We just added that play a few practices ago," Earnest said of the play named for his home state. "We added four or five little plays that we can do. One of them is Kentucky."

"That was the first time I had called it all game. After we scored off it, I was thinking, 'This is great.'"

Wilson took Casciola's pass and sent a missile past Shelby goalie Cara Armstrong, who really had no chance on the shot. "Madeline hit it hard and low. It was perfect," Earnest said. "We should have been up about four goals by that time. You never know when it is going to happen, but Madeline hit a perfect shot for our first goal."

"Kentucky" put the Lady Bearcats up after they had struggled to score for 45 minutes. While Anderson had dominated play, the Lady Bearcats had nothing to show for it and frustration had obviously begun to show.

"Basically, that has happened to us a lot this year," Earnest said. "We had a lot of possession, a lot of opportunities but we don't have a confident scorer. That carries over. The longer you go and you are dominating, but can't score, the other team starts believing, 'Hey, we can play with them.'"

Anderson had controlled most of the first half, but had not found the net. Casciola just missed in the 25th minute, then two minutes into the second half, the sophomore got free on a breakaway but could not finish after Armstrong came out and challenged Casciola, causing a collision.

Three minutes later, Anderson finally broke the deadlock.

"There was no particular reason we call it 'Kentucky,'" Earnest said. "I just wanted something that was clear cut and not confusing. That's my favorite team and it was a clear way to call it."

Andrade sealed the win when she lofted a rebound away from Armstrong with 3:33 to play. "She hit it perfect," Earnest said. "The keeper had no chance."

"Joy is a senior and was wanting to go in. I said, 'Joy, it is your turn to finish.' After she got in, it was about 10 seconds before she scored."

Anderson, now 6-12-2 on the year, will try to avenge a 4-3 loss to Spencer back on Aug. 28. Shelby closed out the year at 7-12-3.

"Spencer has three really good players that dominate the middle of the field and they are very fast," Earnest said.

Anderson could be without junior Claire Prater, who left Monday's game in the first half with a possible upper arm or shoulder injury. Her status had not been determined at press time.

counting when it gets to be that long. Anderson had made it to the state by winning a playoff hole against host Taylor County in the regional tournament, then had hopes of at least making the first day cut and coming back for 18 more holes on the second day of the tourney.

But a day that started with three of the five players' tee shots landing in weeds near a clump of trees, ended with the Bearcats shooting an uncharacteristic 341 for a 53-over score.

The first day cut came at 329, well over what the Bearcats had shot in regional play and above their average for the season.

Golf team scores are compiled by dropping the low score of the five golfers, then adding the remaining four together.

West Jessamine, which had outlasted Anderson in the regional tournament, took its second consecutive state title with a two-day total of 590. Louisville St. Xavier finished second with a 597.

"This was the first time the team has been here in 20 years, so naturally, they are going to be a little nervous with the environment," Beward said. "That was definitely the case."

Lee Robinson, however saw things a bit differently. "To be honest, it wasn't as big as I thought it would be. (Playing in the summer tours) prepared me for this."

Something did as Robinson scored a six-over 78 to qualify for the second round. Robinson displayed what Beward had been touting through the year on No. 9. Due to the seeding and tee times, Anderson had started on No. 10, paired with Hazard and Grayson County, making No. 9 the final hole of the day.

Robinson's approach shot landed in a bunker, but the senior pulled a magic wand otherwise known as a sand wedge from his bag, then laid his third shot about eight feet from the hole.

"That was typical of what Lee Robinson has been doing," Beward said. "He came up with the shot when he needed to and got to play another day. Lee got to play on the last day of the golf season in Kentucky. There is a lot to be said for that."

Robinson came back for the second round with a one-over 73, recording three birdies on the day.

"I played a great round on Wednesday," Robinson said. "I started off rough with a bogey for the fairway bunker on 10 and then went to the next hole, a par-3, and stuck my approach to three feet and made a birdie."

It was a strong start to what turned into a stellar round.

"He made only one mental error and one physical error in the round," Beward said. "In both cases, he saved par on the hole with great recoveries. His save after a duffed second shot on the par 5 fifth hole was a classic. A 90-yard second shot left him with 140 yards for a third shot. He hit that shot to within 15 feet and two-putted from a treacherous place on the green."

Robinson started on No. 10 and fired a two-over 38 over his first nine holes. He caught fire on the front nine to finish with a two-day total of 151 and finish 18th in the state. It is believed to be the highest finish ever for an Anderson golfer at the state tournament.

"When I got to the front I made a lot of what seemed to be impossible up and downs and ended up playing a bogey-free front nine, with eight pars and one birdie for a one-under 35 to finish my high school career," Robinson said. "It was one of the most steady rounds I've ever played, it felt great to go out with a bang like that and to be the only player from Anderson County to ever finish at the state like that."

Beward said Robinson's good second day came with even more pressure than the first.

Anderson County boys' golf coach Jim Beward (left) consoles sophomore Zachary Toles after Toles had finished his state tournament round with a 91, well over his normal scores. Beward believes Toles and some other young players can make a run at another state tournament berth next season.

"He did this on the biggest stage in Kentucky high school golf and in front of recruiters and coaches from high quality golf schools who were looking at one of his playing partners, John Augenstein of Owensboro Catholic. Representatives from UK, Georgia, Florida State and Western Kentucky walked the entire course with Lee's threesome and Lee knew those coaches were there. He was mentally strong enough to continue playing the game and making the shots that he wanted to hit."

"The excitement of his teammates as they walked the course aided in keeping Lee in the moment."

Tuesday, however, things were not so bright for the Bearcats with the other four golfers having subpar rounds.

"When you come from the region to the state, the atmosphere is just so much different," said Tyler Harrod. "It is really hard to explain. We are here and it is pressing. When you get on the course, you have to hit the fairways and greens because it is a really tough course."

Beward saw the jitters early. "Four of the five kids had never seen this before," he said. "You get to the country club and there are kids from all around the state and it is just a different atmosphere with the pressure. You really can't understand it until you experience it."

Harrod, who had qualified for the state as an individual last year, would not use nerves as an excuse for one of the three errant shots by the Bearcats to start the round. "It wasn't nerves. I was here last year," he said. "It was just a bad shot."

Nick Wilson carded an 85 with three double bogeys, while Zachary Toles, who had led the Bearcats in the regional with a 79, finished with a 19-over 91. Toles had three double bogeys and had a 9 on the par-5 fifth hole. Jordan Morgan was well off his game with a 97, which included four double-bogeys and three triple-bogeys.

All were well off their average game.

"Next year, we have the capability of coming back," Beward said, despite losing three of the five players who teed off in Bowling Green. "I think the next time we get here, we will have some battle-hardened leaders and they are going to make the difference for this team."

"The next step is to get here again and have the team play on Day 2."

"We are going to point towards a return trip. This doesn't get old."

MASTER COMMISSIONER'S SALE

In order to comply with the orders of the Anderson Circuit Court, the Master Commissioner will sell the property described in the following actions on Thursday, October 31, 2013, at 11:00 a.m. in the Anderson County Courthouse, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky. The property shall be sold to raise the amounts herein-after set forth, together with interest and the costs of this action, and upon the following terms and conditions (unless otherwise indicated):

(1) At the time of the sale, the successful bidder shall either pay cash or make a deposit of ten percent (10%) of the purchase price, with the balance on credit for thirty (30) days. In the event the successful bidder elects to credit the balance, he or she will be required to post bond and furnish surety acceptable to the Master Commissioner. The bond shall be for the unpaid purchase price and bear interest and the rate of twelve percent (12%) per annum until paid in full.

(2) PLEASE NOTE: The real estate SHALL BE SOLD SUBJECT TO ALL city, state, county, and school real estate taxes, whether current or delinquent.

(3) Easements, restrictions, stipulations and agreements of record in the Anderson County Clerk's Office. Assessments for public improvements levied against the property, any facts which an inspection and accurate survey of the property may disclose and any and all planning and zoning regulations imposed upon the subject property.

4) Where the real estate has insurable improvements, the successful bidder shall, at his or her own expense, carry fire and extended coverage insurance on said improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, to the extent of the Court appraised value of said improvements or the unpaid balance of the purchase price, whichever is less, at a minimum, with a loss clause payable to the Master Commissioner or the appropriate Plaintiff. Failure of the successful bidder to effect such insurance shall not affect the validity of the sale or the successful bidder's liability thereunder, but shall entitle, but not require, the Plaintiff(s) to effect said insurance and furnish the policy or evidence thereof to the Master Commissioner, if it so desires, and the premium thereon or the property portion thereof shall be charged to the successful bidder's cost.

(5) The property shall otherwise be sold free and clear of any right, title and interest of all parties to the action and of their liens and encumbrances thereon excepting easements and restrictions of record in the Anderson County Clerk's Office, and such right of redemption which may exist in favor of the United States of America or the Defendant(s), and any matters disclosed by an accurate survey and inspection of the property.

Houdini got his big break in 1899 and began working in vaudeville shows. As his reputation grew, Houdini began performing more daring acts, like escaping from straitjackets and containers filled with water.
